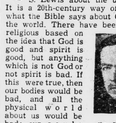
God Invented Us

Lesson for April 1, 1951

"GOD INVENTED it," says C. S. Lewis about the universe. It is a 20th-century way of saying what the Bible says about God and the world. There have been whole religious based on the idea that God is good and spirit is good, but anything which is not God or not spirit is bad. If this were true, then our bodies would be bad, and all the physical world about us would be bad; our souls would be prisoners, so to speak, in a vast fortress of evil.



Dr. Foreman

This is not the truth the Bible tells. The story of Creation in Genesis tells us that when God had finished with making the world he saw that it was good, very good. He invented the world, he invented spirit and matter both, he invented us body and soul. Whatever evil is now in the world and in man did not come from God, it is not a mistake of God's. The world, as God invented it and intends it, is good.

* * *

The World Did not Happen

THE Christian church has changed some of its ideas about creation, but it has never ceased to believe in creation. Very few churchmen, if any, now affirm that the world was created in precisely six 24-hour days, and still fewer would be willing to name the dates on which creation took place.

Nevertheless the Christian church has not given up, and will not give up, her belief that God created all things. The doctrine of creation means, first of all, that the one God willed the universe and what is in it.

The universe did not happen, it did not make itself. It was not made by different gods working against one another. Zoroastrianism, for instance, teaches that the world was made by two gods, one of light and one of darkness. Whatever the god of light created, the god of darkness tried to make something exactly opposite. No, Jews and Christians alike say, there is only one Creator, the infinitely wise and good God.

* * *

Nature's Laws

NEW RELIGIOUS philosophers have sometimes said that the world explains itself. But Christian philosophers, not to mention Jewish ones as well, have seen that the world does not explain itself. There is too much evidence of purpose and design running through the patterns of the universe. Definite laws can be discovered and to some degree understood.

The same laws which govern matter on this planet, and indeed the very same elements, the "building-blocks of the universe," are to be discovered in the remotest stars. If the universe were an accident it would not be tied together as it is.

It would not be a universe of law but one in which nothing could be counted on, nothing expected. It would be no universe but a multiverse, a mad world, indeed no world at all but an infinite confusion.

* * *

Why Are We Here?

BUT CREATION means something more personal. It means that we ourselves have been called into existence by the Almighty,—not by a god of mere sheer power, but by the one God of infinite and all-powerful Love. Man is set here on this planet by some trick of blind fate, mankind is not a mere fleck of foam tossed up by the restless ocean of the Infinite soon to be washed away in the ebbing tides. Man—that means also, we ourselves—are God's invention.

* * *

We are not now as he intended us, to be sure; sin has changed the picture sadly, as we shall be thinking next week.

Why are we here? We are here because God put us here. This means that life has a meaning; but also that we cannot find that meaning without knowing the will of God. His will is for our welfare; only the Creator knows what is best for his creatures. God intended this world to be used by us, not abused.

When any man or group of men get the notion that this world belongs to them alone; or when one generation misuses the resources of the lands and the waters, leaving to their descendants a wasted earth, then God's will in creation is being defied. But when we take his will as life's guide, we are on the way to fulfilling his purpose in Creation.

Bacterial Spores Require Killing at Least 10 Times

Bacterial spores with more lives than the traditional cat have been discovered at the University of Illinois. They may be a clue toward solving problems which cost the food industry millions of dollars

Prof H. Orin Halverson, head of the University's bacteriology department, has found that the spores, or "seeds," of at least one bacteria must be killed not once but 10 times; that is, they have 10 vulnerable spots all of which must be destroyed to kill the spore.

This was discovered by applying modern mathematics to bacteriology. He computed the mathematical possibilities of spore life if such multiple killing were the answer to their resistance to high temperatures. Then he subjected spores of a food-spoiling bacteria known as "flat sour" to 240 degrees for 40 minutes, taking samples at intervals to see how many spores remained alive. The results exactly checked with the probability of 10 "lives" or vulnerable spots.

Spores, though only one sixteen-thousandth of an inch in diameter, are more resistant than bacteria which produce and grow from them. They present many unsolved problems, including why spores form, why only some bacteria have them, what starts the spores to growing, and why some are hardier than others.

Knowledge that some, at least, have 10 lives may be a step towards answering the last question. The tiny bacteria cost the world great sums annually in spoiled food and in extra efforts necessary to prevent spoilage.

X-Ray Aids in Diagnosing Hip Disease in Children

X-rays can play an important role in the early diagnosis of a fairly common hip disease in children.

The condition arises when the ball-like upper end of the growing femur or thigh bone comes apart for reasons not yet definitely known to medical science.

The condition, which has envoked a growing interest among orthopedic surgeons for nearly half a century, should be suspected in any child six to 16 years of age, who complains of a limp or pain in the region of the hip, front of the thigh or knee.

Many children in the past went untreated for this disease. They may have been crippled temporarily in childhood, improved in late adolescence, only to be crippled again in later adult life. Experience in treating this condition in recent times shows that early diagnosis and treatment are of paramount importance.

There is a drastic need for early x-ray examination of the suspected hip so that the greatest curative measures can be instituted at a time when an excellent result is more probable. There should be a comparison of the x-ray films with those of an apparently normal child of the same age.

When the condition is recognized in the early stages, the best form of treatment is an open operation of the affected hip with the insertion of a steel device known as a Smith-Peterson nail. This halts progress of the disease.

Ancient Funny Pictures

Although modern child psychologists have been very busy lately "discovering the comic strips" and analyzing their effects on the modern child, there is nothing new about the funny pictures. They first appeared more than 5,000 years ago. The people of ancient Thebes even drew them on the walls of their tombs. One of the illustrations for the Tomb of Nekht was "a proud rat, carrying a Nosegay and about to drink from a festive bowl. Her head is crowned with a lotus flower, and she is waited upon by a sad-looking cat carrying a fan and a napkin." Another ancient "comic strip" shows "a cat with a crooked stick driving a flock of geese, and a wolf with a staff and knapsack parading with a herd of goats while a second wolf merrily plays the pipe."

THE KICKOFF

(By Barbara Johnson)

Well, I don't believe the Easter Bunny took any initiative out of our boys and girls. In fact I think he helped our baseball boys, since they defeated the Concord High School team 5 to 1 Tuesday afternoon. This sounds like a good beginning, so let's hope they keep up the good work.

Our school really looks like the Easter parade with all the new frocks and pretty flowers. The bunny did a good job of fixing up our students. It does feel fine though, to be back at school and see everyone again.

The Government Classes have been writing to some of our state senators and representatives, and to the president, asking for autographed pictures of themselves to place in their room. They have had many responses to these, although they have not heard from the President.

Among our college students who were home for the holidays were: Faye Wood, Gwen Shuford, Dick Marks, Harry Lawson, Billy Coleman, Byron Babcock, Bill Green, Bolly Conner, Bob Harris, Dick Carter, David Ferguson and Charlie Harvey.

ENTERTAINED AT SHOWER

Mrs. W. O. Slagle entertained last Saturday night, March 24, at a miscellaneous shower, honoring Mr. and Mrs. George Ray Baldwin. She was assisted by the groom's mother. Music was rendered by Paul Cawthorn, Jack Cawthorn and Bob Jenkins, and refreshments accentuated the nature of the party. There were over sixty guests present. The honorees received many nice gifts.

Crack down on US crime gathers speed.

Nearly 200 persons have been killed on Virginia highways so far in 1951. Safety is up to you.

Liberty Chapel

Liberty Chapel, March 28.- Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gunter recently attended the National Symphony Orchestra concert at Sweet Briar College.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Guill and children, of Norfolk spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Garrett.

Dinner guests Saturday evening of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gunter were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Covington and Miss Louise Covington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scruggs were dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Reynolds. Others visiting in this home Sunday afternoon were Mrs. Florene Phelps, Miss Cotell Phelps, Miss Avis Holt and Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Jamerson.
